Another Lie Nailed.

Special to the Gazette:

SOUTH PUEBLO, June 24.—The sensational article in the Denver Tribune about Dick Hornbrook's trip is a lie so far as it concerns what took place in this city. The only thing true is that Hornbrook took breakfast at the Commercial Hotel on Sunday morning. The article shows the lie on its face. It says that Hornbrook arrived in Pueblo on Sunday morning and in Denver Sunday night. Also that he stayed in Pueblo on Sunday night when the breaking in occurred. The story shows it was impossible for Hornbrook to have spent Sunday night in Pueblo. The following statement of the proprietors of the Commercial Hotel may be considered conclusive on this point.

PUEBLO, June 24. No person by the name of Hornbrook was a guest at this house on Sunday night. One by that name took breakfast here on Sunday morning. Nor is there any truth whatever in the statement that any rooms belonging to this house were on said day or at any other time broken into or in any manner disturbed by any person whatever. No complaint of that character has ever been made by any guest of this house and all statements to the contrary are wholly false.

T. HOBART, Proprietor Commercial Hotel.
A. C. Berry, Clerk.

The Grand Canon Case.

Special to the Gazette:

DENVER, June 24. The telegram published in the New York Evening Post of the 24th concerning the Grand Canon case is partially inaccurate. Judge Miller never alluded to the mandate of the supreme court, but said merely that if the Rio Grande Company had abandoned the canon the Pueblo and Arkansas Valley Co. ought to be entitled to the relief sought. He also declared that the supplemental bill of the Pueblo Company did not claim any right under the supreme court decision, and that was essential. They have filed a new bill asking the court to allow them to remain in possession of that right of way until a new road shall be built on the south side of the river by the Rio Grande Company and then exchange, by the Pueblo Company paying the difference to the Rio Grande Company. The latter company consider the court will enforce the mandate of the supreme court, requiring it to pay to the Pueblo Company only the cost in those narrow places where two roads are impracticable.

Hornbrook Says it is a Lie.

Special to the Gazette:

DENVER, June 24. In reply to your dispatch will say that the Hornbrook story in the Denver Tribune of this morning created no sensation. The report published in the Denver Republican that the Tribune has received $4,500 for doing dirty work for the Atchison blunderers is generally believed and Tribune sensations take accordingly. Hornbrook has been interviewed and denies the truth of the Tribune article. Many details have already been disproven. The proprietor of the Commercial House, Pueblo, says it is a lie as far as his house is concerned.

No Writ Yet Granted—Another Suit.

Special to the Gazette:

DENVER, June 24.

No notice of any order of restitution has been received, and Judge Hallett said yesterday that when he made the order at least three days would be allowed the Rio Grande company to show cause why no writ to put it in execution should be issued. All questions relating to the receiver were expressly reserved. It is reported another suit is being instituted against the A., T. & S. F. Co. in Kansas by a stockholder of prior date to October, 1878, to have the action of that company in undertaking to lease the D. & R. G. Ry. declared ultra vires under the laws of Kansas.

WASHINGTON.

Proceedings of the Forty-Sixth Congress.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A resolution was offered for final adjournment at five o'clock Wednesday of the 25th.

Mr. Garfield inquired whether the house could say the appropriation bills would be passed by that time, but received no answer.

Mr. Townsend, of Illinois objecting to debate, the yeas and nays vote was taken, resulting in 82 yeas and 103 nays. Several democrats, including Mr. Stephens, voted in the negative.

The so-called political assessment bill was taken up, and republicans availed themselves of the parliamentary privileges to prevent action.

The house then proceeded to the business on the speaker's table, which was disposed of as follows: Senate amendment to bills relating to the territorial assembly of Montana concurred in, senate bill for the benefit of widow and children of the late Gen. James Shields and increase of the pension of Caroline S. Webster passed.

House adjourned.

SENATE.

A joint resolution providing 30 days extra pay for congressional employees was taken up. Senator Ingalls offered an amendment as an additional section that the provisions of the judicial expenses bill just vetoed be divested of political clauses and jury clauses.

Senator Wallace moved to amend Senator Ingalls' amendment by adding the clause of the judicial expenses bill precluding the appointment of deputy marshals.

Senator Wallace's amendment was agreed to by a party vote.

Senator Wallace also moved to amend by adding jury clauses of the judicial expenses bill.

Before the vote on the amendment was taken, Senator Davis, of West Virginia, moved to adjourn; agreed to, 27 to 14, party vote.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Hull Murder.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A reporter of the Evening Post to-day found the landlady at the house where Christine Cox, the murderer of Mrs. Hull, formerly lived. She is a Mrs. Robinson and said, when told that Cox was arrested for murder, "I never would have believed it of him. He was the most quiet, gentlemanly person I ever had any dealings with. I am sorry for him and his mother." Mrs. Robinson said Cox had many friends, many of whom were connected with the Abyssinian Baptist church, at Waverly Place, of which he was a member. She said he paid his board bills promptly for two or three months, when he lost his position. He never appeared to have a great amount of money, but this did not appear to cause him any uneasiness, as he was of a jovial disposition, and was continually joking and playing tricks upon his fellow lodgers. A short time after he left he secured a situation as cook in the house of a doctor in west 22d or 23d street. He retained this position for three weeks, then left, giving as his reason that he did not like the character of the people in the house. He paid the balance due on his board bill, and from that time on he had no work except odd jobs, laying carpets, etc. Mrs. Robinson said Cox was always steady in his habits, although he frequently stayed out all night when he was thus away one night he explained his absence next morning by saying he lodged with a friend down town. She had never heard him speak of any women, but he had said he was a widower, his wife having died while he was in the south. Cox said to Mrs. Robinson on Wednesday, the 11th inst., that he was tired of loafing around the city, and was going to Saratoga to look for work. Later in the day he said he was going to Yonkers, where he had been offered a situation as cook. He left her about three o'clock that afternoon. He was very jovial and bade her goodbye in a hearty manner. He was not in the house the previous night and she saw nothing of him till Monday of last week, when he returned with a stranger whom he introduced as Mr. Bacon. This man, he said, was employed on one of the sound boats and his home was in Newport. He stayed about the house, going about the streets occasionally with his friend and did a job of carpet laying. Last Wednesday he settled up all arrears of board and appeared to have more money than usual. On Friday morning he told her he was going to Newport to visit his friend. She told him she was going to leave her rooms the first of July and jokingly said if he was not here she would put his trunks on the street. He was engaged all day packing trunks and goods, which he sent away about one o'clock, going himself about two hours later.

Geo. Tayler, a boxer at Oney Geogean's saloon, has been arrested. He is a colored man. Bella Johnson gave him one of the rings which Cox presented her. He and the girl were at the coroner's office today and were subsequently sent to the house of detention. Bella Johnson says she formed her acquaintance with Cox last winter when he was cook for a family in the same street and he procured her a place in the same house to do general house work. He gave her the jewelry soon after the 10th inst., the date of the murder. She also said Cox came to her again on Wednesday, the 18th, saying that he had just returned from Boston. He then gave her one of the rings stolen from Mrs. Hull. The next day he asked her to pawn the ring for him and she requested an old colored woman to pawn it for her. The woman did so, obtaining thirty dollars on the ring. The thirty dollars were given to Cox who left saying he was going to Boston.

Bella Johnson, colored, to whom Cox gave a portion of the jewelry he stole from Mrs. Hull on the night he murdered her, has been arrested and the missing jewelry recovered. The girl was asleep when arrested, and around her neck was the topaz.

BOSTON, June 24. Cox will voluntarily go to New York to-night. He was taken to the photograph gallery and a large crowd followed him to and from the city hall. Cox told the officers he had no idea Mrs. Hull was dead until twenty-four hours after the robbery.

[We failed to get our night report yesterday which contained the news of the arrest of the murderer of Mrs. Hull. The facts are as follows: The murderer of Mrs. Hull of New York was arrested in Boston last Monday night. His name is Christine Cox and he is a mulato. He was seen in Boston a week ago and pawned a cameo set of jewelry which was afterwards recognized as a portion of the property stolen at the time of the murder. Mr. W. R. Balch, a reporter on the Boston Herald, obtained a description of this man and last Monday evening he observed him walking along Shawmut avenue. He followed the fellow until he entered a colored church then called the police and secured the arrest. Cox made no resistence and was lodged in the station house. He appeared stolid and indifferent and confessed his crime without much hesitation. He said that he had been a waiter for eighteen months in the neighborhood of the Hull residence. His confession was substantially as follows: "I had a key to the Hull house but it would not fit, so I raised a window and got in. I had a candle with me. I entered a room and stepped to the side of the bed. Mrs. Hull awoke and said, 'Who is it?' I answered 'The doctor.' I put my hand over her mouth, then I seized a cologne bottle and dashed the contents in her face. After that I got on the bed and made a gag of the bed clothes; she grew weak and I tied her fast. I lighted the candle and held it close to her face when the cologne took fire; after that I took the jewelry. I did not intend to kill her, I only wanted the property."

Mr. Balch receives the highest praise from the New York journals, which express the greatest contempt for the inefficient and bungling efforts of the New York police. Mr. Balch also procured the arrest of the swindler Edward Winslow who fled to Europe some time ago. ED.]

Democratic Caucus.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The advisory committees of the senate and house democratic caucusses held a joint meeting of about four hour's duration this afternoon with a view of framing recommendations on the subject of provididing appropriations for next year's judicial expenses, but adjourned till to-morrow morning without reaching any point of action. A large part of to-day's session was consumed in the discussion of the propriety of the stand taken by the senate caucus yesterday. Several of the members of the house committe condemned it with great earnestness and were replied to by Judge Thurman who occupied about two hours in expressing views in opposition to the proposition to adjourn congress without another attempt to provide for judicial expenses.

He was followed by other senators who spoke in the same strain. Although no action was taken at this joint meeting indications of a debate pointed with a great degree of probability towards the adoption of the following plan that the veto bill be divested of its appropriation of $600,000 for fees of United States marshals and their deputies, and of legislation relating to title 26 of the revised statutes concerning deputy marshals of elections, and be passed with all its remaining features unaltered. Closely following which there will be sent to the president for his approval, or rather for his expected veto, a separate bill made up of the $600,000 item and the other clauses above indicated. It is argued that by this means the courts would be provided for and the marshals in the anticipated event of a veto of the supplemental bill would continue to perform their functions, and look forward to the passage of a deficiency bill for their relief next winter.

One of the several plans considered and advocated is the immediate adjournment of congress without preparing another bill. This proposition was supported by the house committee, and opposed by senate members. A member of the committee although personally opposed to the separation of the bills said that the sentiment of the majority appeared decidedly in favor of it, and while he could not make a positive assertion he felt confident that such a plan will be adopted. Early tomorrow it is thought by members of the committee that an agreement reached by them will be submitted to the joint caucus of the two houses before any action is taken in the house. Owing to the absence of several original members of the advisory committees new members have been added as follows: Senator Morgan takes the place of Senator Voorhees and Senator McDonald that of Senator Lamar. Representatives Singleton and Phister substituted for Chalmers and Carlisle respectively.

Pleniokers in Court.

CHICAGO, June 24. The Bohemian Sharp Shooters were examined in the West Side police court this morning, and a further continuance without bail for a week was granted to await the result of the wounds at their hands on Sunday. Late this afternoon the attorney for these nineteen prisoners appeared before Judge McAllister with nineteen separate petitions for a writ of habeas corpus showing that the petitioners were all poor, and could only prosecute their case as paupers. An order was accordingly made allowing them the right of a hearing without cost. Their petition declares they are held, without the authority of law for a supposed criminal matter, the precise nature of which is unknown. They ask for a preliminary examination.

The Court of Errors.

TRENTON, N. J., June 24. The court of errors and appeals has just issued a writ of error in the case of ex-Senator Cornish, under sentence to state prison for fraudulently raising bills upon the county, and of Noyes, ex-insurance president, now serving a term in the state prison. A writ of error was also dismissed in the case of Mrs. Smith and Covert Bennett, convicted of the murder of Police Officer Smith, the husband of Mrs. Smith.

A Fatal Storm.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, June 24.—A News special from Fort Griffin says a terrific rain storm swept over that place on the 20th inst. Over 8 inches of water fell, flooding the town and causing Collins Creek to overflow. Three people were drowned in the town, and four just below. There is an immense damage to the property in the vicinity.

Snow Sheds Burnt.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—A Reno dispatch says the snow sheds for one and a half miles east of Cisco took fire this morning. The eastbound train ran through it. The westbound train was delayed 6 hours. Nine hundred feet of sned is burned. The fire is supposed to have been started by tramps.

The Widow Still in the Field.

BOSTON, June 24.—The representative men of the Butler wing of the democratic party of the state say the "widow" will receive and accept this fall a labor reform and democratic nomination for governor.

FOREIGN.

Prince Jerome Speaks.

PARIS, June 24.—Prince Jerome Bonaparte will publish a manifesto this evening declaring that he remains faithful to his Ajaccio programme in which he announced his republican principles, and adding he is not a pretender to imperial succession, while his dormant claims bar the succession of any other pretenders.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

A meeting was held in Chicago last evening to organize a bimetallic league. The object as stated in the call being to promote the speedy restoration of silver to its old position as a money metal with weights of coinage the same as gold, and to disseminate correct information on this subject.

Official reports to the agent of the Western associated press from Memphis and vicinity bring gratifying intelligence that the present health outlook has never been more favorable. There are no indications of a return of the fever.

FOREIGN NOTES.

Hanlan will row in the Manchester, England, regatta.

The anti-landlord agitation in the west of Ireland is causing some apprehension.

G. W. M. Reynolds, of London, widely known as a writer of sensational fiction, is dead.

It is probable General Montenfelt will assume the governorship of Alsace and Lorraine about the first of August.

Bismarck has forbidden the circulation in the empire of "Storm Bell," the Russian revolutionary organ published in Geneva.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The president received a communication from the senate judiciary committee with regard to the withdrawal of the nomination of Secretary McCrary as judge of the 8th judicial circuit which states there was no personal objection to the nominee and that the only reason for not recommending the confirmation was that the vacancy could not be anticipated. It further intimated the renewal of the nomination at a proper time will receive favorable consideration.

behaves not as the child of nature but as the child of France. A year or two more and we find him making sage remarks on his father's "Life of Cæsar," in a kind of conversational supplement to the Commentaries, duly reported to the lower papers of the day. He was understood to have displayed the existence of a humorous and generally to have talked like an idiotic little prig which he certainly was not. He was simply reciting his lesson like a good boy. This went on to the very day of the family downfall. We all remember Saarbruck. Of course he could not go in, or come out of that bloodless fray like anybody else. He must emulate the reckless daring of Paddy stopping the cannon-balls with his hat by picking up bullets as they fell around him—he did this in the imperial bulletin, of course, nowhere else—and old soldiers, very old ones indeed, I should say, must weep to see him do it. Well, the fall of the dynasty relieved him of his engagement for this tawdry kind of play-acting, d'un coup, and restored the boyhood he had so nearly lost. From this down to the Emperor's death and in fact for some time after he was suffered to be himself by mere favor of circumstances. He was in a scene where there were no Frenchmen to impress and the English about him were for imperial purposes not worth the cost of a representation. His mother kindly let him alone, and he was never so happy in his life. Then came the day, the wretched day, of this formal assumption of the primacy of his party, and he had to don the sock and buckskin of state once more. Busy imperialist emissaries came and went between Paris and Chiselhurst; a declaration was drawn up for him; he signed it; it was issued; he was again on the boards. His mother insisted on having him addressed in their more intimate circles as 'Sire,' placed herself in a nominal subjection to him as head of the house, though, woman like, still having her own way in everything. This affection of inferiority bored him more than all else, for he is very fond of her, but just for that reason let her do as she wished. It was no light sacrifice. Her well-meant interference for the preservation of his dignity seemed to stop every outlet of cheerfulness and natural gayety. All sorts of harmless frolics incidental to his life as a young officer were forbidden lest they should give her pain. She wigged him about every report that reached her. What story was he telling at mess that made them all laugh so? Who ran up to town with him to the theatre? Where did they go afterwards? If he only would remember his position. The head of the house should not be the buffoon of a mess table; the head of the house should not run the risk of identification as a spectator of a midnight brawl. And why did he sit in the stalls at the theatre, a box would surely have been more worthy of his rank? Who were his companions? Cadets and comrades. A gentleman of the suite would have been a more becoming one for the head of his house."

Visitors to the Rocky Mountains can procure handsome souvenirs of their western tour by addressing Mrs. Charlotte Hill, Florissant, El Paso county, Colorado. Read her advertisement which will appear in the Weekly GAZETTE of June 28.

A number of gentlemen interested in giving a proper reception to the State Press Association, met last evening in Judge McAllister's office. Committees were appointed to get matters into shape, and in a few days full particulars will be given.

A young lady coaxed her lover to take her a sleigh riding. The horse ran away and killed the young woman. The young man married another girl. Moral: Cut this paragraph out, young man, and read it to your [illegible] have enough money by this course of conduct to furnish yourself with a "grub stake" when the winter winds do blow.

Among the important sales recently made was that of a nine-sixteenth interest in the Small Hopes mining pool, sold to E. L. Hinman, of Columbus, Ohio, for $150,000. Mr. Hinman paid down $40,000 and takes possession of the property. He has the refusal of the property for four months. The balance of the purchase-money is to be paid any time during that period.

Mr. Conant with the blandest of smiles informed us on the streets yesterday that he could not find anything in Judge Hallett's decision in reference to a receiver. As we did not have a paper with us we could not point it out. We therefore take this means of calling his attention to the extract from the decision published on our second page. It is as plain as the tail on a muldoon.

Bessie Clark had a bit of adverse luck on her "Pinafore" trip to Colorado Springs. She lost her nightgown and a stage suit. They were tied up in a bundle, with which the crew got to playing ball on the train. The catcher, not being an expert, made a muff, and the apparel went out of a window, and all Bessie's crying could not move the conductor to stop for the recovery of the garments. Republican.

Personal.

The Hon. T. C. Parrish returned from the Gunnison yesterday.

Judge Ross Burns, of Topeka, is a guest at the Beebee House.

Vice-president Wheeler and family have engaged rooms at Manitou.

Judge Bowen passed through the city on his way south yesterday morning.

The Hon. G. B. Reed came down with a party from Denver yesterday morning, spent the day in Manitou, and returned home on the evening train.

Mr. Halsey M. Rhoads who has been canvassing the city for the Denver Republican returns to Denver to-night. He has been remarkably successful and his paper is rapidly growing in favor.

Idaho Springs Tournament.

The Idaho Springs hook and ladder company No. 1, through the proper committee, offer the following prizes for the fire races which come off on the fourth of July. They are open to all regularly organized companies:

STRAIGHTAWAY.

First Prize	$40.00
Second Prize	20.00

HOOK AND LADDER.

First Prize	$40.00
Second Prize	20.00

Straightaway race, 600 feet; hook and ladder race, 300 feet. Races to be conducted according to the rules of the state firemen's Association.

A Fair Offer.

The following offer, was addressed to General Manager Strong on Friday last. It shows that there is no intention to discriminate in rates against the A. T. & S. F. The receiver will operate the road independently of all combinations, treating the A. T. & S. F. and K. P. with equal fairness. The letter hardly gives the A. T. & S. F. any excuse for the present freight blockade. It reads as follows:

DENVER, June 20, 1879.

W. B. Strong, esq., V. P. and Gen'l Manager A. T. & S. F. R. R., Topeka:

DEAR SIR You will see by enclosed circular that the Denver & Rio Grande R'y is now in the hands of a receiver and is being operated under his directions.

He desires me to say to you that all business to and from your road will be handled promptly and at such fair and equitable rates as may be agreed upon by our respective Gen'l Freight Agents.

Yours truly,

D. C. DODGE.

A Big Mining Transaction.

We hear that Mr. G. O. Pearce has sold his interest in the Crystal Park Mining Co. for $110. As he owns 25,666⅔ shares of the stock at a par value of $10 per share, this will net him nearly one-half cent a share. Mr. Pearce has made a very successful sale and has our congratulations. The GAZETTE takes some credit to itself for this successful sale as it advertised the sale of the stock. We were informed some six week ago that 19,000 shares of this company was sold for $190,000 and the money deposited in a bank in St. Joe. From this it would appear that the parties who bought of Mr. Pearce ought to be congratulated also for they have nearly as many shares as the St. Joe parties at an expense of some $489,890 less than that paid by the above named eastern capitalists. We would advise our citizens to follow Mr. Pearce's example if they want to make a "spec" easily. Go into Cheyenne Canon and dig a hole ten feet deep. Then form a stock company with 1,000,000 shares at $10 a share, or a capital stock of $10,000,000. Then if you can net one-half cent a share you will have $5,000. It seems to us that Mr. Pearce lacked shrewdness in not having more shares, for the company might have had 1,000,000 shares as well as a paltry 100,000 as it is only a matter of ink.

The New York Bullion Club.

We are in receipt of a circular from the Bullion Club, New York. Mr. D. G. Croly, formerly managing editor of the New York World and more recently connected with the Graphic, is secretary of this club and Mr. John McGinnis Jr., is chairman of the board of trustees.

Only a few months has passed since the organization, its distinct object being to promote and encourage legitimate mining enterprises. To that end it has adopted a thorough system of records in books, indexes, &c., &c., of every item of interest within its reach connected with the various mines and mining companies throughout the whole country.

Should companies or owners of mines wish to obtain capital for the development of properties which they regard as valuable, they can have, in addition to the present indexing, &c., a special registry of any proposition they may choose to make as to money negotiations, the same to be read at the next meeting of the club, and a printed abstract thereof presented to each member, with reference to all exhibits, &c., on file in the archives of the club.

The fee for this will be $25, which must be forwarded with the application, exhibits, specimen ores, &c., by express, prepaid, addressed to Secretary Bullion Club, 19 West 24th street, New York.

The list of regular members of the club contains some of the best names among the business men of New York. Among the corresponding members are the following: William Bauman, Leadville; Prof. N. P. Hill, Denver; Philip Mixsell, Idaho Springs; William Borden, Leadville; Dick Allen, Leadville. The names of these gentlemen are well known to our readers, and if any further information is desired concerning this club it can be obtained from these corresponding members.

KANSAS ITEMS.

As there are many Kansas people in this city, we clip the following items of Kansas news from the Lawrence Western Home Journal:

Salina is to have a water works.

The Chase County Courant says that it snowed at Cottonwood Falls on the 31st of May.

There was a slight frost in portions of Saline county on the 2d. Very little damage was done.

Elder Beedy has closed his relations with the Christian church at Salina, and returned to Cleveland, O., and will assume the pastorate of one of the suburban churches.

Two dogs attacked Col. Gibbons' flock of sheep, last week, and killed one of them and injured fourteen others. The colonel had paid $50 for the one killed. Baxter Springs Times.

Some sneak thief made an attempt to burglarize the residence of the Rev. J. D. Knox, of Topeka, Sunday night. Failing in this, they entered his stable and cut up a set of harness. Such meanness as this is rare even among thieves.

A sad casualty is reported from Bloom township. On Monday last Mr. J. Z. Sterrit, who resides near Tabor, missed his little son, aged three years, at seven o'clock in the evening and after searching about two hours in every imaginable place the body of the child was found in the well, which was thirty-five feet deep, and had about twenty feet of water in it. It is not known how long the body had remained on the water or how the terrible accident occurred. City County Dispatch.

It seems that this section did not entirely escape damage by the visit of Friday night's storm, for information has reached us that S. S. Bond's house on the old Peter Ellis place, seven miles east of Pleasanton, in Bates county, was totally demolished by a scattered remnant of some cyclone. Mr. Bond and wife and four children were in the house at the time, but fortunately escaped free from injury, which is really wonderful to relate, for the building was wrenched and lifted six feet from the foundation and then twisted into smithereens. Pleasanton Observer.

Professor Cramer's Career.

Prof. J. A. Cramer died at Fountain June 18, 1879. Prof. Cramer was born in the state of New York, May 10, 1822. He was educated at the New York State Normal University at Albany, New York, and graduated September 17, 1846. The professor divided his time between farming and teaching. He was principal of Harmony Seminary in Gerrard county, Kentucky, for several years.

He was also principal of the public schools of Lexington, Kentucky, during the years of 1857-58. He removed to Iowa about 1860, and was elected superintendent of public school for the county of Clayton in 1867. He taught in Hebron, Iowa. From Iowa he moved to Kansas, where he was for sometime actively engaged in the interest of the grange movement. He was made first lecturer of the state and did much in organizing the societies. Two years ago Prof. Cramer came to Colorado with his family, hoping that the climate of this state would benefit his son's health, which was declining. He taught the public school at Fountain in the winter of 1877-78, and taught at Little Buttes last winter. At both places he was highly esteemed as an educator. Prof. Cramer was taken sick in May and lingered until the 18th inst. when death came to his relief. The disease seemed to be largely confined to the head, dementing him almost entirely from the very first. Notwithstand Prof. Cramer's family was at Canon City, and he was deprived of their company and kindness for quite a while after he was taken sick, he had the closest attention of both watchers and physicians.

The people of Fountain acted nobly in providing for his every want. Some two weeks before his death Mrs. Cramer took leave of her afflicted children and came up to nurse and comfort their father. It was a very sad visit for Mrs. Cramer. The afflicted children needed her presence at home, but the condition of her husband had become such that she felt she must go to him. She came and watched faithfully over him till the last. Mrs. Cramer had the sympathies of the whole community.

While Prof. Cramer was a thorough scholar and a well read man, he was unostentatious. Many of the teachers of El Paso County recognized his ability as a man and a teacher at the teachers' institute held in Colorado Springs not long since.

Over the Hills to the Gunnison.

The trail from Leadville into the Gunnison country has not yet been traversed by a great army of correspondents, but couriers have been sent on to spy out the land and the following sprightly letter, which we copy from the Denver Times, is a preliminary report from one of these observing scouts:

There are no stages running into this region, and the only means of reaching it are on foot, or on horseback or by freight wagons. I chose the latter and went down Chestnut street, Leadville, to where the better class of frame buildings begin to degenerate into log warehouses, stables and corrals. In a little, one-story log cabin, to which a soft of mud stockade is added in the rear to contain hay, back of which is an open space, or corral, for teams, I found the office of W. H. Kingsberry & Co., freighters, and engage passage by the next wagon over the range and Cottonwood Pass, a distance of seventy-five miles, and the nearest practicable route for wagons. Over the door of their office is an immense pair of elk horns. The driver was driving about town with his team looking for freight and passengers, with a large red placard on his wagon headed by the word "Gunnison," in big letters. His load was not made up till five p. m. and I proved to be the only passenger, thus securing a place by the driver on a good spring seat.

Long strings of huge freight wagons with trails drawn by four or six mules or horses were coming up California gulch from Malta, stirring up a blinding dust, while three or four miles down a heavy snow storm was raging, obscuring the valley and entirely hiding the rugged form of Mount Massive. The last piece of freight being tied on, the driver shouted to his strong mules, cracking his long whip, and we started down the gulch into a dense snow storm on the 13th of June, en route for the Gunnison country.

We drove eleven miles and camped on the willow-fringed bank of the Arkansas, sleeping comfortably under the wagon despite a very high wind and occasional flurries of snow.

Next morning Saturday was bright and pleasant, and our ride was delightful, with the exceptions of much dust and rough roads. The valley soon narrowed into a canon. The scenery is rugged and picturesque, and the completion of the road will add another romantic route for tourists.

At Granite I found Mr. W. W. Orrick, associated with Geo. Leonhardy, Recorder of Chaffee county, engaged in copying all the records of old Lake county that pertain to the present County of Lake. There are between 40,000 and 60,000 folios to transcribe, and they employ five clerks, and expect to be occupied till about the first of October. They are at work in a log cabin, in the lower part of the log built, granite-skirted village.

Thirty miles below Leadville the rocky canon widens out into a broad and magnificent park, and we left the Canon City road and drove across the prairie toward the entrance to Cottonwood Canon, being given and lay between the foot hills under Mounts Yale and Princeton. Driving a few miles, we saw before us a line of pines, apparently a sort of hedge row crossing the park. It proved to be several miles distant, and when we got to it we found it a belt of timber fully a mile in width. Just beyond, and near the large block house of a ranchman, where a beautiful trout stream runs into Cottonwood creek, we made our camp in the midst of a beautiful grove of cottonwoods. I can hardly imagine a more beautiful camping-ground. As the sun set, it was showing down the valley, but we enjoyed warmth and sunshine. We slept soundly, with the roar of the streams for a lullaby, and were on the way again at 8 o'clock in the morning. Three or four miles drive brought us to Cottonwood Springs in the canon, where a large and beautiful two story frame building is being erected for a sanitarium. It will soon be finished and contains nearly a hundred rooms, with baths and all the modern conveniences. It is situated in a picturesque nook of the narrow canon, between lofty, granite-ribbed mountains, and is surrounded by a grove of cottonwood and pine trees.

From there to the summit, a distance of fifteen or sixteen miles, the ascent is steady and rapid, and the scenery grandly beautiful. There is some very bad road, and we only went thirteen miles further, going into camp at the "Half Way House," two and a half miles below the summit, and in the neighborhood of huge banks of snow and ice; one of the latter being within a few rods of our wagon. The night was very cold, but had our beds under our wagon been strewn with poppies instead of withered leaves we could not have slept sounder. It was Sunday, and we honored the day by going into camp early. The Half-Way House is a large log building, tavern, grocery and feed store combined. It has been built only a few days, and is kept by an old Californian named Osborne. We met ten wagons and a few horsemen beween the springs and the Half-way House.

Early next morning we started out to cross the range, and found the road horrible nearly all the way up. Half a mile from the summit of the pass, the road crosses the timber line, and we saw long, deep drifts of snow, shelving over the near summits of the range. A large drift runs down and crosses the road at the very top of the divide, and a passage for the road is cut through it, through which we rode between walls of snow fifteen feet high on the 16th of June and I sprang out of the wagon and set foot, for the first time, on the Pacific slope.

Leaving the wagons to go ahead, I climbed the nearest peak, walking up a smooth incline perhaps a quarter of a mile, and was rewarded by a sublime view of vast mountain ranges; the Elk Mountains standing boldly out to the west, and a portion of Taylor Park lying smiling in the sunshine. I followed a spur of the range for a mile or more, and then a snow storm, accompanied by thunder, came up suddenly and drove men down into the creek canon, to find myself far ahead of them.

The road for the first three miles down the slope is one of the worst in America, being very steep and running through mud and over rugged boulders, till the worn-out teamsters swear sulphurous volleys of awful blasphemy. We passed several broken down wagons, and saw one driver break a wheel, tipping over his load.

Suddenly the road improves, and I again climbed into the wagon, and the mules trotted briskly along grassy bottoms toward the Gunnison valley. Coming down to Willow creek, we entered a beautiful level park, enclosed by dark green foot hills, and turning south, drove up toward Hillerton and Virginia City. Grass is abundant and cows, horses, mules and burros were grazing in large herds upon the prairie.

At the of the park, on beautiful level ground, we came in sight of some long rows of new log houses and tents, disposed in regular streets, and were soon in Hillerton.

I found it a neat, thrifty-looking camp, and counted seventy-four log buildings, one frame building, and seventy-seven tents, besides the foundations of perhaps a score of new buildings just started.

Expecting to meet only strangers, I was surprised to find myself among old acquaintances, and was soon in a neat carriage, driving rapidly toward Virginia City, two miles further up the valley in the timber. There I counted forty-four buildings and forty-six tents, with many more buildings starting, and noticed a wide-awake, bustling look.

A steam saw mill is in operation two miles above Virginia City, and a steam shingle mill at Hillerton. Another saw mill and shingle mill, owned by the Hillerton company, will be running by the close of this week, and a saw mill is also building up in Bertha gulch, only a short distance. A brick yard is in operation, and the first kiln will be burned in a few days. A postoffice has been established here for a week, with tri-weekly mails, via Alpine.

Messrs. Olney & Kellogg from Lake City have their type here and their presses on the way, and expect to print the first number of the Occident this week.

There are a number of ladies in the camp, who seem to enjoy roughing it. Mrs. W. L. Beardsley has a fine horse and carriage and enjoys driving. Mrs. Small and Miss Fannie Small of Denver are also here.

The first native citizen, a healthy boy, was born to the wife of Mr. C. C. Harris last week, and was promptly presented by the town company with a city lot.

An appropriation has been made by the owners of the Pendery mine for an injunction against those working the Rough and Ready property, both situated on Carbonate Hill. Attorneys Bissell and Weston will appear for the prosecution and D. P. Dyer of St. Louis and others for the defense. The attorneys and witnesses have left for Del Norte where they will meet Judge Bowen and the case will be heard. Rouielle.

ADVERTISERS

Are already beginning to feel the advantage of a good weekly newspaper issued every Saturday amongst their friends and patrons in the country.

IMPORTANT TO THE LADIES.

From time immemorial personal adornment has been practiced by the human race and the standard of civilization of any nation, ancient or modern, can, with unerring certainty, be determined by it. While it is most justifiable with men it is the absolute duty of woman to beautify her person by all the little arts which fashion, that true indicator of advancement, suggests. It is an old adage and a true one that to be out of the fashion is to be out of the world. There is no adornment so important as that of the head and none again so natural as the hair. Hence it is anticipated that our endeavors to place within the means of any lady to purchase the most beautiful head-dress of the day will be appreciated. We would call your attention then to the new coiffure, it being pronounced by all as the nicest head-dress ever invented, and with which a lady can with ease dress her own hair in the most fashionable and becoming manner. Thanking those that have favored us with their work, and to those wishing our services in making anything to be had in a first-class hair establishment, we would say, call immediately as we only remain one week more. We are now offering bargains in switches. Real human hair switches, three stems, nearly one yard long, only $2.00.

Yours Respectfully,

W. BROCKWAY AND WIFE,

ART MATTERS.

I have secured the services of Mr. Frank R. Nims, of New York city, a recent student of the Academy of Design. He comes with the best recommendations, and is prepared to make all eastern styles of photos. Also, first-class portraits in oil, from life or photo, executed by J. Brom. Slinn, of St. Louis, a young artist of established ability. He has located his studio in my gallery. I have just added a new scenic background, of the "Garden of the Gods." Call and get a picture from this background. Rocky Mountain Views constantly on hand of all principal points of interest in this vicinity.
